Advanced Project Management Program — International

The Advanced Project Management Program

The Office of Professional Development of the Project Executive Group (PEG) is pleased to offer its Advanced Project Management Program — International through its Training Alliances.

This program was co-founded by Eric Jenett, a co-founder of PMI and first PMP - Certificate No. 1, over a decade ago. His idea was to develop an advanced project management training program for experienced project managers. He believed it needed to be in an academic setting at the graduate level, but practical in application. The result—advanced training for experienced Project Developers and Managers while providing them with sufficient contact hours for their PMP re-certification.

The Advanced Project Management Program at Rice, was only available at Rice University's Jones Graduate School of Management — Executive Education. This was due to the decade-old joint venture between the Project Management Institute (PMI) Houston Chapter and the school. Created by co-founder and Adjunct Professor of Management, Paul Allen, it is no longer available at Rice due to his June 2008 retirement. Paul now brings the program to the international community through the PEG Alliances.
